

CALL FOR PAPERS
9TH ANNUAL KU-MU GRADUATE HISTORY CONFERENCE

Historical Frontiers

Lawrence, Kansas April 29-30, 2011
Deadline for proposals: January 15, 2011
$100 prize for best visiting paper
Keynote speaker: To be announced

Ever since the American historian Frederick Jackson Turner published his “frontier thesis” at the end of the nineteenth century, historians have been fascinated with frontiers, whether fringes of societies or borderlands of states. Frontiers also mark the transition from the way things have been to the way things could be. Each successive generation of historians strives to push forward the frontiers of historical knowledge, unearthing new sources and blazing new trails in interpretation and methodology.

With the purpose of providing a collegial forum for the latest pioneering research, the conference committee cordially invites graduate and undergraduate students to submit proposals for panels, roundtables, and individual papers on any historical topic. A cash prize of $100 will be awarded for the best paper presented by a non-KU scholar.

Please submit a 250-word abstract and one-page CV to: neilscho@ku.edu
Full panels are encouraged and must include a commentator.

Deadline for proposals: January 15, 2011
